On Saturday paſſed the Seal, a grant of an annuity of 450l. per annum to Lovell Stanhope, Eſq; late law clerk in the ſecretary's office.

Notwithſtanding our Courts of Juſtice have ſo implicitly ſubſcribed to the ſuperiority of the Houſe of Commons, it is ſaid that queſtion will ſhortly be brought to a nicer teſt.

APRIL 23. Yeſterday the third reading of the Eaſt-India recruiting bill came on according to order in the Lower Aſſembly, and after a debate thereon, the queſtion was put, whether the ſaid bill ſhould be read a third time, the houſe divided, when it appeared 45 for it, and 45 againſt it; the numbers being equal, the ſpeaker declared for the ayes: An amendment was afterwards moved for it, and other debates aroſe, after which the queſtion was put, whether the bill ſhould paſs; the houſe again divided; the ayes were 50, and the noes 55.

Yeſterday the records, books, &c. belonging to the ſecretary of ſtate's office for the northern department, were moved to the new office in Cleveland-row, St. James's, where the buſineſs is for the future to be tranſacted.

APRIL 24. It was given out by the enemies of Mr. Alderman Wilkes, that the buſineſs of his large ward would always ſtand ſtill, for that he would never attend, and ſeldom come into the city. He has not been ſworn in above a year, has regularly attended the ward buſineſs himſelf, attended every meeting of the common council, and every meeting except one, of the court of aldermen. We may therefore expect the ſame attention to public buſineſs, if he is choſen ſheriff the enſuing year.

It is confidently ſaid, that in a conference which the Miniſter lately had with a Great Perſonage, the latter obſerved, that he was often admoniſhed in the papers to conſider King Charles's fate, and to beware of it. I will follow the advice, ſaid he, for Charles's fate was owing to quarreling with his parliament, which I will never do.

APRIL 25. Tueſday being St. George's day, the laudable aſſociation of Antigallicans held their anniverſary feaſt at the Ship tavern, Radcliff croſs, Mr. Alderman Wilkes, the grand preſident of this year, Sir Joſeph Mawbey, the grand preſident of the laſt year, and ſeveral other gentlemen, walked in proceſſion, with the ſtewards to Stepney church, where an excellent ſermon was preached by the Rev. Mr. Evans, chaplain to the Lord Mayor. After divine ſervice, the gentlemen of the aſſociation went to the Tower to pay their compliments to the Lord Mayor, and to deſire his Lordſhip's leave to nominate him to the preſidentſhip for the enſuing year. The Tower gates were ſhut, barred and bolted againſt them, and admittance abſolutely refuſed. The picket guard was turned out. Several parleys enſued, and meſſages paſſed, for above half an hour between the governor and the gentlemen of the aſſociation. There was great affection of an alarm in the garriſon, as if the people meant by force to releaſe their magiſtrates, whom they certainly conſider as detained againſt law. The concourſe of the people was prodigious, and their acclamations beyond what has been heard on any occaſion. At laſt it was agreed that only twenty gentlemen ſhould be admitted, and a ſmall wicket was opened, through which, and between the guards, they paſſed to his Lordſhip's apartments. Mr. Alderman Wilkes then in the name of the gentlemen thanked his Lordſhip in a ſhort ſpeech for the noble ſtand he had made in defence of the liberties and conſtitution of this country, and deſired his permiſſion to nominate him for the preſidentſhip of the enſuing year. The aſſociation then joined again at the Tower-gates, and proceeded through Whitechapel to the Mild-end aſſembly room, where, after the uſual toaſts, Sir Joſeph Mawbey took notice, that that meeting was generally underſtood to be the moſt numerous meeting in the year of the freeholders of Middleſex, and therefore he wiſhed to take their ſenſe about the propriety of Wilkes's being a candidate as ſheriff for the county the midſummer enſuing. He declared that for his part he heartily approved the meaſure; for Mr. Wilkes's conduct had been ſo conſiſtant and uniform, ſo invariably directed to great public purpoſes, that he wiſhed to have him called forth on every public occaſion, where he might be uſeful; that he knew many perſons intended to keep him back, not only this year on pretence of the Middleſex election, but for ever; that they had declared he never ſhould be ſheriff, but he was ſure the city and county though more juſtly, and will call him forward as a moſt uſeful and efficient man, and that he ſhould be glad to ſee the buſineſs of the Middleſex election in Mr. Wilkes's hands as ſheriff, for he was ſatisfied that he would do juſtice to the liberties of the freeholders of that county, and the whole nation, which had been injured in his perſon. After Sir J. had finiſhed, two freeholders deſired to know what could be done in caſe Mr. Luttrell's vacating his ſeat, or of a diſſolution of parliament. James Adair, Eſq; then ſaid, that both theſe events had been foreſeen, that only three new caſes could cauſe Mr. Luttrell's vacating his ſeat, the demiſe of the crown, or the diſſolution of the parliament; that in the firſt caſe, the ſheriff ought not to obey the writ, nor call the freeholders together, there being no legal vacancy for the county, that as to the two other caſes, the ſame events might happen in any year when Mr. Wilkes was ſheriff as well as the preſent, and therefore could be no particular objection to him at this time; that whenever either of thoſe events did happen, ſuppoſe Mr. Wilkes then ſheriff, ſome friend of the cauſe and Mr. Wilkes would be found to ſupply the vacancy for the time; that he heartily wiſhed Mr. Luttrell might accept a place the enſuing year, and then the ſpirit and fidelity of Mr. Wilkes in their cauſe would be ſhewn in its full force and ſtrength. When Mr. Adair ſate down, there was a general cry of "the queſtion! the queſtion!" Sir Joſeph Mawbey then ſaid, "as many as are of opinion that Mr. Wilkes be a candidate for the office of ſheriff of this county the year enſuing, hold up your hands." Every hand in the room was upon this held up. Succeſs to Mr. Wilkes, as ſheriff, was toaſted in a bumper with three cheers, and the company promiſed to ſupport his election. Mr. Wilkes then thanked the gentlemen for the honourable teſtimony they had given him of their approbation, and declared that the public cauſe was always neareſt his heart, that he lamented the great buſineſs of the Middleſex election had ſo long laid dormant, and ſeemed of late ſhamefully neglected; that he wiſhed for an opportunity to revive it, and ſhould rejoice if that was the conſequence of his ſheriffalty; that ſo far from betraying the rights of the county, as had been wickedly ſuggeſted, he would defend them to his laſt dying moment; that if Mr. Luttrell ſhould vacate his pretended ſeat, and a new pretended writ ſhould iſſue, he would pay no obedience to it, nor call the county together in conſequence of an act void in itſelf; for it muſt proceed on a falſe ſuppoſition, on the lying pretext, of Mr. Luttrell's having a legal ſeat in the Houſe of Commons, which no man could have, who was not freely choſen by the people; that Mr. Luttrell could not ſit as their repreſentative, the very idea was inſolent; that he was ſeated there by a manifeſt force of uſurpation, by illegal violence; that the county and nation conſidered Luttrell as having no ſeat among the repreſentatives of the commons of the realm, and therefore the pretence of its being vacated was abſurd. He likewiſe mentioned the care he would take of a new freeholders book, complained of at preſent as exceedingly incorrect and faulty, every page of which, he ſaid, the gents of the miniſtry had now got by heart; but he hoped to emedy all the abuſes of it, and to give that additional ſecurity to the preſervation of their lives and properties. Mr. Wilkes concluded, that he pledged himſelf to them for the preſervation of their moſt deareſt liberties, the rights of election; that he perfectly knew the conſequences to himſelf of ſuch a conteſt with the preſent majority; that he wiſhed for that important hour; that he would be undaunted in the ſupport of their privileges and of thoſe honourable diſtinctions he enjoyed by their favour, which the malice of his enemies had only given them more frequent opportunities of confirming to him, and that he expected their ſupport and eſteem no longer than every action of his life proved him their faithful ſervant, and the ſtrenuous aſſertor of the injured rights of that county, and of the whole nation. Mr. Wilkes's ſpeech was received with general applauſe, and every gentleman preſent appeared perfectly ſatisfied. The queſtion was afterwards put, and carried unanimouſly, that "Brass Croſby, Eſq; Lord Mayor of the city of London, "be choſen grand preſident for the year enſuing." The meeting was very numerous, notwithſtanding the great pains taken to keep the members from attending.

Whatever impreſſions the public may receive of the amicable ſtate of affairs abroad, it is generally allowed to be a very judicious obſervation, that the period of peace was never yet known to be the period of buſineſs; and that when accommodations once took place, except in the preſent inſtance, an interchange of curious and private conferences were things wholly unknown between England and the Houſe of Bourbon.

The bill to prevent ſtock jobbing, was read yeſterday, in the Houſe of Commons, for the firſt time.

This morning the Court of King's Bench, having nothing to do, was up in leſs than a quarter of an hour; a circumſtance hardly ever known before.

It has been remarked, that more capital burglaries have been lately committed than at any former period. Experience proves that hanging is not the proper puniſhment for theft.

We hear that the Kennedies, who are to be tranſported, the one for life and the other for fourteen years, will carry with them commiſſions to produce abroad, as ſoon as they arrive, the one a captain's, worth 1000l. and the other a lieutenant's worth 600l.

Thurſday laſt died at his ſeat in the country, Sir Edward Clive, late Judge in the Court of Common-Pleas.

Letters from Dublin mention, that the White Boys ſtill continue their meetings in different parts of that kingdom, and that they have levied contributions on ſeveral poor defenceleſs people.

There are no Councils now held at Carlton Houſe, as all the members thereof conſtantly attend Blenham Houſe.

An addreſs from Coventry, to the Lord Mayor and Alderman Oliver, is ſhortly to be preſented.

Yeſterday the Earl of Suffolk had a long conference with his Majeſty at the Queen's palace.

APRIL 26. A liſt of the ſubſcribers to the lottery for 1772, was moved for by Mr. Poultney, on Tueſday laſt in the Houſe of Commons, Mr. Cornwall ſeconded the motion, and urged very ſufficient reaſons for ſuch a liſt; thoſe of the year 1769 and 1770 being brought already before the houſe, he ſaid that when the lottery bill for this year came before the houſe, he ſhould offer a clauſe to be inſerted; and the purport of it was, to prevent any member from having or ſubſcribing for more than 20 tickets.

Lord North ſaid, that the liſt could not well be laid before the houſe, as the money for the lottery was not paid by the ſubſcribers, and there were many ſubſcribers who would not wiſh to have their names made public; that they ran eagerly into it, and the tickets were generally given and ſubſcribed for by the wealthy bankers, and ſuch other gentlemen as had a mind, and were deſirous of obliging government.

Colonel Jennings obſerved, that, as one of the community, he was obliged to the public for taking the tickets. He begged to ſee the liſt produced, that he might know to whom of that aſſembly the public were ſo much obliged.

Mr. Poultney ſaid, it was impoſſible to be otherwiſe, that 20,000 ſubſcribed for in tickets by 50 members of the houſe, muſt have ſome influence upon their minds.

Mr. Baker obſerved, that 40s. upon every ticket was an improper douceur for a member of that houſe.

Mr. Walpole ſaid, that ſuppoſing that the tickets were given away among the members of that aſſembly, it was their will and inclination to oblige government by ſubſcribing, and that they had the ſame right only which other perſons had, and that as they paid for their tickets, they run a chance of loſing as well as gaining by them.

Mr. Byng ſpoke with an honeſt zeal for the independency of members in that aſſembly, and that no bias, by any means whatever, ought to be on their minds, eſpecially by the diſtribution of lottery tickets, as it differed much from enjoying a place under government; the latter was open to all the world, the former was a private influence, the knowledge of which the public, without the liſt produced, would never be able to come at.

Mr. Dowdeſwell got up next, and obſerved, that the whole of the lottery being ſubſcribed for, although the money was not all paid in, it was no excuſe for not laying the liſt of ſubſcribers before the houſe; that it was not long ago that 20,000 were given or ſubſcribed for by the members of that houſe. He aſked whether the lottery would not be filled without aid of members of parliament? He ſaid, a member who accepts of a place ſtands forth to his conſtituents, and he is no longer a member of parliament unleſs they chuſe him, ſubject to ſuch influence as the place he has accepted of may have over his mind; they may reject him if they think fit; but a member who accepts a ſhare of lottery tickets is under ſecret influence that his conſtituents cannot any way know of. This man is always under the influence of the miniſter, as he accepts of a favour before he; and will never he votes againſt the miniſter, it is in the power of that miniſter to expoſe him in having received a ſecret bribe, let his vote be given at what diſtance of time it will.

A diviſion followed, on which the numbers were, for the motion 58; againſt it 93.

Yeſterday a board of admiralty was held, at which the Earl of Sandwich aſſiſted; and we hear that no orders are given for paying off, and putting out of commiſſion any of the men of war, except ſuch as are in want of repairs.

Yeſterday General Elliott's regiment of light dragoons relieved Colonel Burgoine's on the St. James's duty; and the latter marched into quarters.

It is ſaid that his Majeſty has been pleaſed, in conſideration of the dearneſs of proviſions, &c. to order that the deduction of one ſhilling in the pound, which has hitherto been made by the paymaſter general of the army, from the pay of the foot ſoldiers, be remitted; as alſo the direction to the regimental pay-maſter and ſurgeon, the better to enable them to provide neceſſaries.

The nobleman who had lately the title of Earl of Angleſey, having been deprived of it, retains only that of Lord Viſcount Valentia in the kingdom of Ireland. And we hear the Lord Mulgrave of Ireland, intends to lay claim to the title and dignity of Earl of Angleſey.

Yeſterday his Grace the Duke of Richmond paid his compliments to the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor, as did Edmund Burke, Eſq; Sir F. Franklin, Bart. and ſeveral other gentlemen in the minority.

APRIL 27. Thurſday the Houſe of Lords concluded their inveſtigation of the embanking bill, on which they have been employed ſix days. Having had the fulleſt evidence of the ſubject, and heard council, they debated the queſtion in the Houſe, and it was carried in favour of the embankment and for committing the bill, 29 to 4.

Thurſday, at 5 o'clock, Mr. Serjeant Glynn preſented to the Houſe of Commons, the petition of Mr. Allen praying for juſtice againſt the ſoldiers for the murder of his ſon in St. George's Fields, on the 10th of May, 1768. Mr. Serjeant Glynn moved, that the petition might be brought up to the table. Lord North was very ſtrenuous againſt the motion, and ſaid the ſoldiers did no more than they were ordered to do, and that it was too late in the ſeſſion for ſuch an affair to come on; Beſides, did they think that a man would ſurrender himſelf who was charged with murder?---Mr. Edmund Burke was very warm on the occaſion, and condemned, in very ſevere terms, the letter ſent by the Lords Weymouth and Barrington.---Mr. Charles Fox ſaid, that if ever he ſhould attain the high honours held by theſe Noblemen, he certainly ſhould in the like circumſtances take pattern by their letters.---Sir Joſeph Mawbey ſaid, he hoped, that if that honourable gentleman ever ſhould arrive to ſuch honours, he would retract his words, and take warning by thoſe letters.---Mr. Onſlow threw out, that Allen's ſon was engaged in a riot, and was buſy in inſulting the ſoldiers. The petition ſets forth, that the ſon of the petitioner was not in the riot, but that it was another man, who made his eſcape from the ſoldiers. After a long debate, which laſted till 11 o'clock, the queſtion was then put, Whether the petition ſhould be brought up; the Houſe divided, Ayes 35, Noes 158.

The buſineſs on Thurſday about St. George's Fields, came on in ſo ſudden a manner, no notice having been given in the Houſe the day before) that the Miniſtry were obliged to ſend for Members from all parts; and it is ſaid, that ſeveral were fetched out of the play-houſes between ſeven and eight o'clock.

The petition in ſaid was drawn up under the inſtruction of Mr. Serjeant Glynn, Mr. Dowdeſwell, Mr. Burke, Sir Joſeph Mawbey, and ſome other gentlemen of the Minority.

There are now only three Wards which have not addreſſed or agreed to addreſs the Lord Mayor, &c.

APRIL 29. The army have ſhewn that they retain the ſame ſpirit of liberty, which Engliſh armies have always ſhewn; they have had the judgment in the firſt inſtance to nip the attempt of introducing foreign troops into Engliſh dominions, and have dared to vote, in ſpite of influence, againſt the bill for the more effectually raiſing a militia force for the protection of the ſettlements and poſſeſſions of the Eaſt-India Company, and threw it out, to the great joy of all thinking men, who are friends to his Majeſty and the Houſe of Hanover.

On Friday Thomas De Grey, Eſq; member for Norfolk, brother to the Chief Juſtice, made his appearance in the Court of King's Bench to receive judgment of a challange ſent to William Tuke, Eſq; in order to try the right of enemy, after the example of our ancient forefathers the Goths and Vendals.---Sentence was paſſed to pay a fine of one hundred pounds, and to be committed 'till it was paid.

APRIL 30. The bill for regulating ſtock-jobbing is put off till next ſeſſions.

Alexander Murray, Eſq; who was baniſhed ſome years ſince for a contempt of the Houſe of Commons, has been lately recalled from his exile by the King's Privy Seal.

The following may be depended on as an authentic list of the ships ordered to be paid off. The Nassau, of 90; Bellona, 74; Cornwall, 74; Dorsetshire, 70; St. Antonio, 64; Augusta, 64; and Edgar, of 60 guns; at Chatham. The Royal William, of 84; Arrogant, 74; Ajax, 74; and Elizabeth, of 74 guns; at Portsmouth. The Cambridge, of 80; Temeraire, 74; Defence, 74; Prince of Wales, 74; and Hero, of 74 guns; at Plymouth. The Conquestador, of 60, and the Glasgow, of 20 guns, at Sheerness. The Seaford, of 20 guns, and the Vulture Sloop, at Deptford.

A fine house is going to be erected with all possible expedition at Hyde Park corner gate, for the residence of the Ld. Chancellor.

A match was fairly stole upon the friends to the East-India bill from the division being moved for by its opposers, at a time when several of them who would have voted for its passing, were not returned from dinner.

John William Birch, Esq; is appointed captain of a troop in the royal regiment of horse guards, commanded by Lieutenant-General Conway. And Lieut. J. Darby, is appointed adjutant to the said regiment.

Extract of a letter from Barr in Carrick, in Scotland, April 20.

"Thursday last at midday, in open contempt of all authority civil and military, there marched through this city a band of smugglers, consisting of about one hundred men, and upwards of 150 horses, all loaded with tea, except twelve that were loaded with spirits. They went northward towards Dalmellingtoun, where they arrived the same evening. There were upwards of two hundred of them when they left Glenluce in Galloway, but fifty of them had taken another road, and had been all loaded at Glenluce bay, from three smuggling vessels, which went from the coast of Ireland to land the rest of their cargoes. ---This band was attacked near Glenluce by a party of the military, and some excise officers in the neighbourhood; but the military, consisting of a serjeant, and sixteen men were defeated, got their firelocks all broke, and many of themselves much hurt, but no Lives were lost in this engagement."

HAGUE, April 26. The last letters from Paris advise, that the Duke de Harcourt has refused to take the command of the troops in Normandy. They write from the capital of that province, that on the 15th inst. the day after the first bed of justice, the parliament assembled and issued an arret, which declares the members of the new parliament, intruders, usurpers of the effects of other people, enemies of the state, and violators of their oaths, and strictly forbids the acknowledgment or execution of any of their arrets: This proceeding will probably cost the parliament of Rouen very dear. Eleven members of the great council, who composed part of the great chamber, and the tournelle of the new parliament, have refused their places. Two of them, viz. Messrs. Michael de Montpetit and de Bonnaire, being magistrates of great intigrity and capacity, are much regretted. It is still uncertain what part the Chatelet will take in the present conjuncture.

VIENNA, April 7. The scarcity of corn, almost every where, and the apprehension of its continuance, has induced their Imperial Majesties to prohibit distilling from corn in all the hereditary countries, which consumes a great quantity every year.

VENICE, March 24. The government has granted a passage to the Austrian troops that are to march from Lombardy into Hungary. These troops are to be reinforced with 2000 men.

TURIN, April 10. On the 10th inst. about 10 o'clock in the morning, the court being in Gala, the Ambassador from France had a solemn audience of the King and Royal family, in which he made a demand of the Princess Maria-Josepha-Louisa, of Savoy, as spouse of the Count de Province. He had afterwards an audience of the Duke of Savoy, and then of the Duchess, at whose left hand he sat the Princess Maria-Josepha-Louisa, who after having received the tokens of the consent of the Duchess her mother, was presented by the Ambassador with a letter from the Count de Province, together with the picture of his Royal Highness.

MARSEILLES, April 19. Letters from the Dardanelles advise, that great preparations are making for the defence of that passage. Hessen Bey has refused the post of Captain Pacha, and remains at Lemnos at the head of those troops, with which he drove the Russians out of that island.

PARIS, April 22. Last Thursday in the night the musqueteers carried Letters de Cachet to the 12 members of the great council who had resigned, ordering them to return to the palace, and resume their functions. Some of them would not go there, and others returned only to renew their protests. Mr. Lambert, the Dean, having his Letter de Cachet in his hand, declared that the King might command his fortune, his person and his life, but that he could not dispose of his honour or his conscience.

CHARLES-TOWN, JULY 2.

OUR Accounts from North-Carolina are, that on the 18th of June, Captain James Walker, of the Artillery, came to Wilmington from Hillsborough, where a few Days before he left his Excellency the Governor, with the major Part of the Troops. That General Waddell and Captain Moore had marched with 600 Men for Mecklenburgh and Tryon, from which Counties very few of the Insurgents had surrendered. The Court of Oyer and Terminer was sitting at Hillsborough when Captain Walker came away, and on Monday sentence was to be passed on several of the Insurgents who were taken by the Loyalists. Captain Walker also informs, that a Party of Men, blacked and disguised, had stopped General Waddell's Ammunition Waggon, on its Way from C. Town, took out the Ammunition, and blew up the Waggon, which contained several valuable Things for the Use of the General and his Officers. This, with the Disaffection of his Levies who had villanously taken the Government's Money, and yet refused to fight in Defence of it, obliged him to retreat to Salisbury, where he lay penned up till after the Battle of the 16th ult. Sundry Papers and Letters were found in the House of Hermon Husbands, by which it appears, the Insurgents were sure of Victory, and intended to make a general Massacre of all those that opposed them. They looked upon themselves so much Masters of the Province, that many of the public Offices had been disposed of among themselves. Hermon Husbands, James Hunter, James Butler, and Reduap Howal, the principal Authors of the present Disturbances, have made their Escape.

We hear the Brig. Amity, Capt. Ash, is arrived at George-Town, in six Weeks from London, and has brought an Account of the Prerogation of Parliament, and the Releasement of the Lord-Mayor and Alderman Oliver from the Tower.

We also hear, that as soon as the above Intelligence is sufficiently authenticated, the CLUB, No. 45, will have an elegant Entertainment, in Honour of those Worthies, who have withstood the despotic Mandates of the vilest Set of Men that ever surrounded the British Throne.

Friday Evening, the Sloop Sally, Jesse Hunt, Master, arrived here from Pensacola, with the Lieutenants Barker, Litchfield, and Carne, and some Subalterns belonging to the Army.

Sunday the Sloop Sally, Benjamin Greenway, Master, sailed for St. Augustine, with an Officer, and some Recruits for the 31st Regiment.
